Donald Trump has posted an AI-generated image of himself dressed in papal regalia just 11 days after the death of Pope Francis.

The image, shared on Truth Social, shows US President Trump wearing a mitre with a large gold crucifix on a chain hanging around his neck.

From there, it was published without comment or explanation on the White House X, formerly Twitter, and Instagram accounts.

It comes just a few days after Trump joked that he'd like to be the pontiff when asked who he would like to succeed Francis.
